BIOGRAPHIES OF OUR SPEAKERS

Ingrid W. Reed

Ingrid W. Reed directs the New Jersey Project, an initiative designed to reinforce and expand the contributions of Rutgers' Eagleton Institute of Politics to the governance and politics of its home state. Among its initiatives are programs on campaign and election activity and reform, ethics reform and governance issues.

Reed's work focuses on encouraging voter participation and confidence in elections and government. She organized a study of television coverage of the 2005 and 2006 elections by nightly news programs and of the 2005 and 2007 New Jersey Clean Elections Pilot Program. She has prepared papers on "Issues in Voter Participation: Do We Know What They Are? If We Know, What Can We Do About Them," "The 2001 New Jersey Election," for The Century Foundation, and was associate director for the report, "The New Jersey Initiative: Building Management Capacity in New Jersey Municipalities."

She is frequently interviewed for analysis of New Jersey politics by state, national and international media and has written op-ed columns for major New Jersey newspapers.

In her public service activities, Reed has a wide range of experiences in state politics and planning, governance and community affairs including the New Jersey planning committee for implementing the federal Help America Vote Act; chair of the Capital City (Trenton) Redevelopment Corporation, founder and board member of New Jersey Future, and a trustee of the Community Foundation of New Jersey.

Before joining the Eagleton Institute in 1996, Reed was vice president for public affairs and corporate secretary of The Rockefeller University in New York City, and assistant dean of Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs where she also directed the Rockefeller Public Service Awards Program.

John Hernandez - has been a social science librarian specializing in politics, public policy, public administration, and government information for over nine years. He earned a B.A. in political science at Columbia University. He later earned a master's degree in information science at the University of Michigan followed by a master's degree in public administration at New York University. Since November 2002, John has been the Librarian for Politics and U.S. Documents at Princeton University. Prior to joining Princeton, he served as Coordinator for U.S. and International Documents and Librarian for Politics and Public Administration at NYU, where he began working in 1999.

John is an active member of ALA's Government Documents Round Table (GODORT), where he has served as coordinator of the Federal Documents Task Force and chair of the Government Information Technology Committee. John is a former chair of the New York Library Association's Government Information Round Table. He is also active in the Law and Political Science Section of ACRL, particularly in instruction, and a member of the American Political Science Association.

Dr. Joseph Romance

Drew University Professor Joseph Romance specializes in American politics, political parties, elections, and American political thought. Dr. Romance has co-authored two books: A Republic of Parties? and The Challenge of Politics. He is currently working on two new books - one on the American founding and the other on welfare reform. Joe received his B.A. from the College of William and Mary in 1988 and his Ph.D. from Rutgers University in 1995. He has been at Drew since 1996.

NADINE SERGEJEFF

Nadine Sergejeff received the DANJ 2008 Award for Outstanding Achievement in a Government Documents Paper/Project. Her paper is entitled “The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956 and the Interstate Highway System in the United States.”

DANJ created the annual award in 2001 to be given to the student who creates the “best” paper/project in the Government Documents class each fall at the Rutgers School of Communications, Information, and Library Science. Some of the factors considered in the selection are intellectual content, organization, and usefulness to the profession.

Nadine’s paper may be read at the DANJ web page (<http://www.danj.org/awardp.html>).
